

Mission of the Controller

Controllers design and accompany such management processes as identifying goals, planning and directing, thus shouldering some of the responsibility for accomplishing those goals.

More specifically:

- Controllers provide transparency in such areas as strategy, performance measurement, finance and processes, thus helping to achieve greater efficiency.
- Controllers coordinate the various targets and plans. They organize enterprise-wide reporting with an eye to the future.
- Controllers moderate and design the controlling process of goal-finding, planning and management control so that decision makers can target their efforts.
- Controllers provide the key data and information needed for business decisions.
- Controllers develop and maintain controlling systems.
